Playing to win

Hackney's water polo team helped the borough reach its highest-ever position in 33 years of the London Youth Games

THE young people of Hackney did better than ever in their chosen sports at this year's London Youth Games.

In the 33rd annual event, 550 young people from across the borough excelled to come sixth overall out of the capital's 33 boroughs.

An amazing 28 individual golds were won in athletics, swimming, diving, kayaking, rowing, sailing, cycling and judo, while the borough's tennis and table tennis players won team golds. Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "It's a testament to the hard work and dedication of the young people as well their coaches and teachers."

Hotels help community

HOTELS in Hackney are set to charge a £1 a night voluntary donation – the first of its kind in the UK.

The money will go towards a new community fund so residents can benefit from the growing number of tourists visiting the East End each year.

Launched in a new events space at the Ace Hotel in Shoreditch by the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, the Hackney Community Fund is a unique project which will see a voluntary £1 donation added to a guest's bill for each night's stay in a Hackney hotel, which is capped at three nights. The money will be used to fund a range of community projects including: training and employment schemes, supported by the Council's Ways into Work Programme; cultural events; and improving public spaces.

> "It's a great way for guests to show support for the positive changes that are happening all around the borough"

The Ace Hotel, and Boundary hotel, also in Shoreditch, have already signed up to the fund, and will start collecting the donation from next month. Five more hotels are set to sign up in the coming months, and discussions are ongoing with other hotels across the borough. An estimated £100,000 is expected to be generated in the first year.

Mayor Pipe said: "This is the first time a council has gone into partnership with its local hotels for the benefit of the community, to support residents into employment, improve public spaces and help celebrate the character of the borough. I'm very pleased that forward-thinking partners in the hospitality sector have joined forces with the Council in developing new ways to support the improvement of the borough."

Peter Prescott, from Boundary, said: "We are delighted to be one of the founding members of the fund. We very much look forward to supporting some exciting arts and training projects for local people in Hackney. It's a great way for our guests to show their support for the positive changes that are happening all around the borough."

Paul Rogers from Highgate Holdings, one of the partners involved in the fund, said: "It will mean we can make a positive contribution to the lives of local people and help support some exciting community activities in Hackney. We're proud to support the creation of the first of these funds in the UK."

Get in the carnival spirit

RESIDENTS are being encouraged to decorate their homes and businesses for the Hackney One Carnival.

The Council-run event returns on 14 September giving people the chance to win a prize for the best dressed properties.

A mass of flags, bunting, banners are all positively encouraged.

> "Together we can bring more colour and carnival atmosphere to help make the borough welcoming"

Anyone living on the five streets along the route – Narrow Way, Mare Street, Richmond Road, Dalston Lane (between the junctions with Ridley Road and Narrow Way) and Ridley Road – can get involved by brightening up the outside of their home or business.

It is hoped this will help create a vibrant and creative procession route for the schools and groups performing on the day.

Prizes will be awarded in five categories for: best decorated front of house; best flags and banners; best junior decor (for a children-friendly garden, with youngster's involvement); best senior garden (by residents aged 60 and over); and Hackney tallest sunflower (grown or hand made). The use of recycled materials will score extra points.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health Social Care and Culture, said: "We want people along the Hackney One Carnival route to decorate their homes and businesses and come out and join in the celebrations.

"Together we can bring more colour and carnival atmosphere to help make the borough a really welcoming place for residents and visitors on carnival day."

Prizes will be presented at the Hackney One Carnival awards night later in the year, when carnival groups will also be honoured for their efforts at the event.

Judging will take place on 13 September. Judges will include representatives from local businesses, community gardens, schools and Council staff. The competition is also linked to this year's Hackney in Bloom competition.

News in brief

Community garden launched at the Colville Estate fun day

MORE than 150 people enjoyed live music, a barbecue and spot of gardening while finding out more about the regeneration of Colville Estate on 12 July.

A new community garden at Kellett House, building on the work of keen local gardener Michael Jones, was launched by residents and Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, who planted a sunflower on the day.

Residents saw designs and models for the third phase of Colville's regeneration, by Karakusevic Carson Architects and David Chipperfield Architects. Also, the Colville Estate Tenants' and Residents' Association talked about their members perspectives, with support from PPCR, the estate's independent adviser service.

Cllr Glanville said: "Working with the local community on Colville has always been critical to the success of the regeneration, which made the launch of this new resident inspired garden extra special."

Volunteers are welcome to help out with the garden, where radishes, beetroot, onions, and runner beans are being grown.

Colville is being regenerated by the Council over 15 years, to replace 435 existing social rented and leasehold homes with 935 new ones for social renting, shared ownership and private sale. The first phase, Bridport House, was completed in 2011, providing 41 homes for social renting, co-funded by the Council and the Greater London Authority.

Trade at Ridley Road Market for as little as £5 per day

STALLS at one of the borough's most exciting, diverse and busiest markets are now available to new traders.

The Council is looking to introduce extra pitches to the St Thomas Rise area of Ridley Road Market, at a reduced fee of as little as £5 per day. Ideal wares would include fresh flowers, DIY tools, stationery and more.

The Council and Ridley Road Traders' Association have been working together since 2010 on a range of projects to improve the market including reducing waste, increasing recycling and providing better parking.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Ridley Road Market is one of the most culturally diverse and interesting markets in Hackney. It attracts thousands of shoppers and visitors from across London. This new initiative will bring in an even wider range of trading for the benefit of all people who visit the market."

Hackney goes to Paris

Creative young people meet fashion legend Jean Paul Gaultier for exclusive catwalk show

A GROUP of young people with a passion for the creative industries were given exclusive access to a Jean Paul Gaultier couture catwalk show during Paris Fashion Week.

This once-in-a-lifetime opportunity marked the conclusion of a 10-week training programme called 'Creativity Works: Fashion'. The project gives local 18 to 24-year-olds, not in education or employment, the chance to break into the fashion industry with mentoring and work placements with leading industry names such as Dazed Group and London College of Fashion.

As part of the trip on 9 July, the 30 young people visited the Paris headquarters of Jean Paul Gaultier, and were spellbound by a catwalk show for an audience of just 100 invitees. Afterwards, the group got to meet the fashion icon and ask about his career and inspirations.

Gaultier said: "From my own experience, if you love what you want to do and if it is truly the profession you want, I think it is about working all of the time. Everything is possible, but you have to love it."

The designer was keen to support the project, citing a school trip to London, and the inspirational street styles that he saw then, as a defining moment in his decision to pursue a career in fashion.

> "Hackney is establishing itself as the fashion centre for London with an abundance of creativity"

The meet-and-greet followed a visit to the studios of another internationally renowned fashion designer, Jean-Charles de Castelbajac (also known as JC/DC). The group explored his studio, examining his clothing, furniture, prints and archive collection. JC/DC also gave an inspirational talk about his own life story, and how he was influenced by the culture of London's East End. A question and answer session followed along with a group 'selfie' photo taken by the designer and tweeted on his official Twitter page.

JC/DC said: "It's important that young people listen to people of my generation so we can help them to become stronger, sharp and more protected. I learnt from my masters, but I have also had to learn by myself.

"You have to cultivate yourself, you have to go to the Tate gallery, watch TV, read books and then you become strong, and have the knowledge and determination to succeed."

As part of the programme, the group also made and sold items for the Barbican's Ram Place Fashion Market, which took place in Hackney between 12 and 20 July and saw designers, artists, traders and performers unite to celebrate youth fashion.

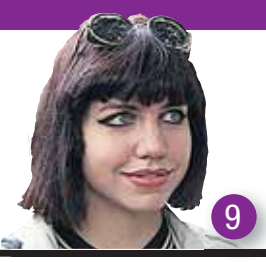

Creativity Works: Fashion is funded by Mayor's Fund for London, delivered by Create and A New Direction through Create Jobs, and is supported by the Council.

The programme helps develop the practical skills and experience, via a range of workshops, placements, and mentoring from top designers, artists and photographers, to ready young people for working life.

The programme will also contribute to the development of Hackney Fashion Hub, an initiative that aims to foster an environment where young designers can work and offer local employment opportunities.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "Hackney is establishing itself as the fashion centre for London with an abundance of creativity typical of the borough, which is one of the most diverse, exciting and celebrated locations in the capital.

"The Creativity Works

Creativity Works: Fashion case studies

Nadine Makeida Davis, 22
"Doubting myself has been an obstacle, but I have learnt about how to communicate better and manage my time effectively. In my work I want to encourage a positive message about females and encourage female empowerment. I take inspiration from the young people in Hackney – it's important to encourage and support each other."

Becky Popoola, 20
"I have learnt so much in a short space of time. The programme has helped me fall in love with the creative sector again and I have grown in confidence. When I go for a job I now know what they will require of me. I don't know what challenges I will face in the future but I will see when I get there."

Byron Morris, 23
"Being a part of the programme has changed my life. I have learnt about cameras, framing and sound editing. I want to document things through film – show the culture of Hackney and its sense of community and life. I have learnt a tremendous amount and I want to open my own business after this – it's confirmation of my dream and now I can go and grab it."

Joyce Ogunfeyimi, 19
"I never thought in my lifetime that I would meet Jean Paul Gaultier among only 100 guests – the opportunities of the programme are massive. You get to network and make a lot of connections. My new skills have enabled me to think what I want to do and how I am going to do it to achieve my ambitions."

A chronicle of change

RESIDENTS are being asked to help identify the people in a selection of photos for a new exhibition set to open at Hackney Museum in October.

It will be comprised of 100 plus images taken mainly during the 1960s and 1970s at Gibson's Photography Studio on Lower Clapton Road. Curators are particularly keen to hear from people of African, Caribbean and South Asian backgrounds who had their photos taken at the studio at that time.

The amazing collection of negatives holds many untold stories that museum staff are keen to uncover.

Images from the 1970s include weddings outside Hackney Town Hall; studio portraits featuring nurses from the Caribbean in their uniforms; Asian women wearing their best salwar kameez and saris; family portraits at home; university graduations; and fashion styles of the decade.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "The photos in the Gibson's collection are a wonderful peek into the everyday lives of Hackney's past.

> "The collection illustrates a period of social change in Hackney after the Second World War"

"The exhibition will be a major part of the Council's Black History Month celebrations in October so we want to find out as much as we can about the people in the photos. If anyone can help, please get in touch."

Photography enthusiast Kevin Danks acquired the collection a few years ago. He donated it to Hackney Archives after realising its connections with the borough. He said: "The collection illustrates a period of social change in Hackney after the Second World War. In the 1950s almost every shot features white, working class people and by the early 1970s this changes and the diversity we see today is evident. The rightful owner of the collection is Hackney Archives."

A selection of the negatives, which have been digitized, can be viewed online, including a 1952 boxing match, a 1952 netball team from Nisbet House, Homerton; and a production of 'The Wizard of Oz' by Southwold School. To see these images, visit: http://goo.gl/Lj31VM

Teams at the London Youth Games did better than ever before, coming sixth place overall

HACKNEY'S young sports stars are celebrating after achieving the borough's highest-ever position in the annual London Youth Games.

The 550 team members, aged between 11 and 17, took sixth position overall and were named 'most-improved borough' after the pan-London finals at Crystal Palace on 4 and 5 July. Hackney fielded 47 teams, which competed in 31 sports, taking home 11 team and 56 individual medals.

> "It is clear there is impressive talent in Hackney and we're getting better and better"

An amazing 28 individual golds were won in athletics, swimming, diving, kayaking, rowing, sailing, cycling and judo, while the borough's tennis and table tennis players won team golds. There were many great performances throughout the Games, which began last November, but the standout achievements came from the Hackney girls' table tennis team, who retained their title, the girls' football team, boys' athletics team, and the indoor rowing team, who all medalled for the first time.

Daniella Taylor, who won bronze in the girls' Year 7 category for indoor rowing, said: "London Youth Games was a great experience, I really enjoyed representing my borough and it was a massive bonus to win bronze in my event."

Calvin Walker Hall, Head Coach and Team Manager at Hackney Judo Club, said: "I'm so proud of the team. Their hard work and determination to achieve their goals this year at the Games was just amazing. They had great technique and results."

More than 5,000 young people trained towards final selection for Hackney in the hope of competing against the best from the other 32 London boroughs.

Music producer, composer and DJ: Gabriel Prokofiev is best known for his record label and local classical club night 'Nonclassical'

COMPOSER, music producer and DJ, Gabriel Prokofiev, cannot envisage living anywhere other than Hackney.

Best known for his record label and club night 'Nonclassical', Gabriel is also the grandson of Russian composer Sergei Prokofiev.

The father-of-three moved to the borough 13 years ago, first living in Stoke Newington and then settling in Hackney Downs with his family.

He says: "I always wanted to live in Hackney as it has a long history of being a creative place."

Gabriel has collaborated with a number of prominent artists, such as Thom Yorke (from Radiohead) and Lady Sovereign, whose first album, 'Public Warning', was produced by him.

More recently, Gabriel has returned from Seattle, where he wrote compositions for rapper Sir-Mix-A-Lot, who, along with the 70-strong Seattle Symphony orchestra, performed 'Baby Got Back' and 'Posse On Broadway'.

The final productions have been uploaded to YouTube, and gone viral, amassing over 2.5 million hits between them.

Originally from Greenwich, Gabriel had dreams of being a pop star at a young age, and at 10 formed a band with friends. They called themselves Syntax, taking their name from the error message on a BBC Microcomputer.

Gabriel says: "We used to perform at the Lewisham Labour Club. I don't think they knew what had hit them; this bunch of precocious 14-year-olds singing all their pop songs."

He later studied philosophy and music at Birmingham University, but admits that he felt daunted by his family name. Adding: "I always felt a bit self conscious. I've grown through all that now, but at 19 it was still an issue to me. It was a bit intimidating being the grandson of a famous composer."

> "We've given people confidence that you can programme contemporary classical music outside the concert hall"

While at university, Gabriel took a year out to live and work as a volunteer teacher in Tanzania. It was an experience that shaped him greatly, and still influences his music today.

He partnered with percussionist Joby Burgess to produce 'Import/Export' in 2010, using unconventional instruments – such as Fanta bottles and oil drums – to create electronic music.

He says: "I went into a shop near Ridley Road and asked for 12 Fanta bottles. I said, 'it has to be the Nigerian one with the serrated edge.' They may have thought I was a bit strange. But now, to my dismay, the Nigerian Fanta bottle has changed its shape. When you tilt the bottle and the liquid moves it changes the pitch."

In fact, Gabriel has a real soft spot for Ridley Road market. He says: "I really like travelling and at Ridley Road you feel like you're on the other side of the planet. It has that traditional market culture, with the original Cockney background, and has absorbed all the African and Jamaican stalls. It's a real mix."

Gabriel wants to put contemporary classical music on the sound map, making it a 'valid genre.' He says: "We've been doing the Nonclassical nights for 10 years, and I've noticed that for the past three years there is more contemporary classical music being performed in London in alternative venues.

"I think the audience is growing, and I'm really pleased Nonclassical has helped that happen. I think we've given people confidence that you can programme contemporary classical music outside the concert hall."

Nonclassical club nights take place at the Shacklewell Arms in Dalston on the first Thursday of every month. Gabriel is set to release his latest album 'Selected Classical Works, 2003-2012' on 28 July.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: My husband keeps taking envelopes out of the recycling and putting them in the rubbish bin as he says that the plastic windows cannot be recycled. Is this true?

A: Some councils do not accept envelopes with windows in the recycling, but in Hackney it is fine.
Tell your husband that he can put most envelopes into the recycling. Jiffy bags or padded envelopes however, can not be recycled, so please reuse them where possible or put them in the rubbish bin.

Kynaston Gardens reopen

Main: Hackney-based band Section 11 performing at the opening ceremony of Kynaston Gardens; inset: the new community allotments

A COMMUNITY garden has re-opened to the public following a renovation project.

The Friends of Kynaston Gardens secured £84,000 funding with help from the Council and charity Groundwork, to improve the little green oasis in Stoke Newington.

The gardens, off Kynaston Avenue, had suffered as a result of anti-social behaviour, such as graffiti and street drinking. The new design for the park includes mini allotments for residents and school groups, wild flowers to improve biodiversity, and a new play area for children.

> "The gardens now look fantastic and are open to be used by the community"

More than 200 people attended an opening ceremony on 6 July.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "It is fantastic that the park has reopened for the community. The opening day shows how loved this space is and I am so pleased that people can once again use the park on a daily basis."

Dan Stevenson, a member of The Friends of Kynaston Gardens group, said: "After years of hard work, Kynaston Gardens is finally open.

"The launch event on Sunday afternoon was an amazing success with hundreds of local people attending and a great band, Section 11 from Hackney, providing tunes.

"Thanks to the grants that we've raised, the gardens now look fantastic and are open for business to be used by the community."

Youngster wins design competition to promote walk to school scheme

A HACKNEY girl has designed a badge that will be worn by thousands of children as part of a national campaign to get more youngsters walking to school.

Honor Muskett was one of 11 winners of the Walk Once a Week badge design contest run by charity Living Streets, in conjunction with the Council, to promote travelling to school on foot.

Honor's design, featuring an electric whisk, was chosen over 140,000 other entries on the theme of 'when I grow up'. The eight-year-old, who attends St John of Jerusalem Church of England Primary School, in Kingshold Road, was presented with a trophy emblazoned with her drawing by children's author Loretta D'Souza last month. Honor also received a copy of the best-selling writer's latest book at the awards ceremony.

Honor said: "I can't wait to see my badge next June. The whole experience was epic and fun."

Tony Armstrong, Chief Executive of Living Streets, said: "Less than half of our children walk to school now. Living Streets is working hard to reverse this trend and the badges are an essential part of the campaign. Walking helps keep kids fit and healthy and safeguards their health for the future."

INVITATION TO A PUBLIC EXHIBITION

24-26 JULY 2014

Join us at a public consultation to find out about exciting plans to redevelop the warehouse buildings at 80-84 & 88 Wallis Road (known as Daro Factors).

Groveworld and Pollard Thomas Edwards architects are working on proposals to replace the low-grade warehousing and to restore the corner building at No. 88. The transformed premises will contain high quality studio space for the artist community and much-needed new homes.

We would like to show you our plans and hear your views before we submit a planning application to the London Legacy Development Corporation, the local planning authority for the Queen Elizabeth Park and surrounding area, later this Summer.

Hackney WICKed

1-3 Aug, various locations

NOW in its seventh year, the streets and warehouses of Fish Island and Hackney Wick will be teeming with artists, photographers, sculptors and other creatives for this three-day festival.

Performance art will come from Eloise Fornieles, who will use video, photography and spoken word in a two-day endurance set; Rosie Ridgeway, who deploys music 'to generate alternative actions'. Other artists participating in the festival include psychogeographer Laura Oldfield Ford; box camera photographer Stephen Gill and sculptor Daryl Brown.

As well as galleries, Hackney Wick's cafés, bars, restaurants, shops and workshops will also be taking part, including 90 Main Yard, CRATE Brewery, The Hackney Pearl, and The Yard Theatre.

Win a white water rafting adventure

THE season is well underway at Lee Valley White Water Centre and it is the perfect weather for it.
The world-class venue is where Team GB made history by winning gold and silver in the Olympic Canoe Slalom event.
People of all abilities are welcome to try white water rafting, on the same Olympic standard competition course that has challenged the world's best athletes.
Visitors can also try hydrospeeding, which is similar to bodyboarding; or paddle on a hot dog – an inflatable kayak. Both activities take place on the Legacy Loop, a smaller yet challenging white water course.

Hackney Today has teamed up with the Lee Valley White Water Centre to offer a pair of tickets to win a rafting adventure.

To be in with a chance of winning, send a postcard to Lee Valley White Water Rafting Adventure competition, Hackney Today, Maurice Bishop House, 17 Reading Lane, E8 1HH; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 5pm on 6 August.
Submissions must include a name, address, contact number and email address. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

PREVIEW

Beyond Caring

Until 26 July, The Yard Theatre, Hackney Wick E9 5EN

HOPELESSNESS sticks to the walls of this meat-processing factory, where four shift workers are thrown together to clean what they are told, when they are told.
The set is devoid of any home comforts. The furniture is austere, the colours and materials range from cement to steel.
Every move the employees make is closely monitored. Extended toilet breaks are deducted from pay. Time off is not authorised.
The audience can almost taste the potassium hydroxide in scenes in which the characters clean the equipment for a little longer than necessary, which may make for some uneasy viewing.
Their manager, Ian (Luke Clarke), is desperately unhappy but cheers himself up with delusions of grandeur.
Yet these zero-hour contractors are taking every hour they can get for fear of losing their jobs and at the detriment to their physical and mental health.
In preparation for the play, writer and director Alexander Zeldin worked as a cleaner himself to gain first-hand experience of agency work. The play is inspired by Florence Aubenas' book, 'The Night Cleaner', an investigation into unemployment during the recession.
The employees are constantly reminded of their expendability. Tenderness unfolds between the characters as they awkwardly initiate conversation, but any moments of warmth between them are dampened by Ian's arrival.
Long after the curtains are drawn, the play lingers in your throat. Zeldin brings these unremarkable lives into the spotlight, and we are forced to look at them, however uncomfortable that may be.

Reflections of War

Until 30 August, Flowers Gallery, 62 Kingsland Road, E2 8DP

An exhibition to mark the 100th anniversary of the start of the First World War is taking place at Flowers Gallery in Shoreditch.

The exhibition focuses on the human cost of war, rather than the political aspects. The majority of artists on show draw from their personal experiences of war, such as John Keane, who was commissioned as the official recorder for the Gulf War in 1990-91 by the Imperial War Museum, and Peter Howson, who was appointed as the official war artist for the Bosnian Civil War in 1992-95.

Artist Hanaa Malallah, cites her experience as a refugee from Iraq as a catalyst for her work. While Tim Hetherington's art depicts servicemen in a more vulnerable light, perhaps showing them as their mothers would see them. Hetherington's interest in the human impact of combat was cut short when he as killed in 2011 in a mortar attack in Libya, aged 40.

Garden's greener

A SPECIAL needs school in Hackney is celebrating after receiving its first 'outstanding' Ofsted report.

The Garden officially opened its doors last September, bringing together Horizon and Downsview schools. They had both been judged as 'good' following their last inspections.

In their report, inspectors noted a rapid improvement in teaching levels. The report states: "Teachers have an outstanding knowledge of their pupils' abilities and learning needs. They have high expectations of the pupils' progress."

> "The school is a calm and welcoming place. Pupils enjoy school, attend well and feel safe and secure"

It went on to say: "Behaviour is outstanding. The school is a calm and welcoming place. Pupils enjoy school, attend well and feel safe and secure."

The pupils all have special educational needs including autism. Some are unable to communicate verbally and need a high level of care.

The new school building includes specialist rooms for therapeutic sessions, an independent living area which helps older pupils get used to doing everyday tasks around the home, sensory rooms, play areas and teaching spaces designed with the pupils' specific needs in mind.

It was designed to meet pupils' needs, as part of the Council's Building Schools for the Future programme, which has seen every secondary and special educational needs school in the borough rebuilt or redesigned.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "I'd like to extend my congratulations to all the staff, pupils and parents who've all played a part in making The Garden such a great school. It's fantastic to have their achievements recognised by Ofsted.

"Having visited The Garden, I was initially really impressed by their fantastic new building, but as soon as I started looking around, it was the interaction between the staff and pupils that was truly captivating."

Kt Khan, The Garden's Executive Head said that she felt the key to the school's success was an unrelenting drive to raise standards and practice through training support staff.

She added: "The senior team is immensely proud of how far both schools have come since 2011 when our journey from good to great began. It is right and proper that parents and carers of such vulnerable young people have the best possible provision on their doorstep – it's a real Hackney treasure."

News In Brief

Urswick wins drama awards

THE Urswick School clinched two out of four highly sought-after awards in a recent ceremony to celebrate the achievements of drama students.

The Rudolph Walker Inter-School Drama Awards pitted six schools against each other to win four awards.

Urswick won the award for best production with their short play, 'Meet The Babatundes', which was written, directed and performed by five students. The play was about the children's attitude towards materialistic obsessions and the impact it had on the family.

The expert panel of judges included TV producer Kath Beedles, theatre director Philip Hedley, and actress Cheryl Ferguson, who played Heather in 'EastEnders'.

The best actress award went to Damilola Jayeola for playing the lead role as the mother in the play.

Damilola said: "The experience has taught me how to be more confident and has been a truly inspiring process that I won't forget."

The ceremony took place on 22 June at Millfield Theatre, Edmonton.

Summerfest draws crowds

THOUSANDS of people attended an event at Hackney Community College to take part in hands-on technology workshops.

The Digital and Creative Summerfest on 3 July invited visitors to 'have a go' at activities as well as longer classroom workshops and seminars by guest speakers.

Visitors could create computer game characters or a TV studio weather report, try their hand at building a PC, make music, and test their health after high performance workouts. They could also attempt to design catwalk hair, unique cupcakes or tile mosaics.

Plus there were fashion shows, live music and performances from the college's arts and circus students.

The day was part of the Techmix's Digital Summer Trip programme of events and the National Skills Show Experience. It was opened by Brent Hoberman, co-founder of travel website lastminute.com.

Marcus Cyrille, 11; Theia and Phoebe Gaynor, six and eight, from Hackney BMX Club; Marcell Cyrille, 10; Anthony Duncalf, 15; below: fund winners

A head start for sports

A CROP of the borough's future sporting stars are being given a helping hand to achieve their dreams thanks to the Council.

Eleven talented young people skilled in a range of sports – including ice hockey, cycling, kayaking and cricket – are being supported by the Hackney Youth Sport Fund.

The scheme provides financial assistance to young athletes from grass roots to national level.

Marcell Cyrille, 10, plays for Lee Valley Ice Hockey Club and one day hopes to represent Great Britain at the Winter Olympic Games.

He said: "The funding will help me improve my skills a great deal. I would encourage every athlete in any sport to apply and see what it can do for you."

Nationally ranked member of the Great Britain Southern Regional Talent Kayak/Canoe Academy, Vanessa Humphrey, 18, was awarded funding towards competition costs and her time spent at a national development camp. She has since qualified for further support from the fund.

> "Hackney does a huge amount to further youth sport in so many different ways"

Her coach, Shaun Pearce, said: "Vanessa has shown great commitment in attending our academy and has climbed steadily through the national rankings in both kayak and canoe classes."

Coaches who give back to the community also benefit. Dedicated volunteer Dick Millard was awarded funding to attend a Royal Yachting Association course to aid the work he does at Lea Rowing Club.

Dick said: "Hackney does a huge amount to further youth sport in so many different ways. What is particularly good about the Youth Sport Fund is that it recognises and supports the efforts of both volunteer coaches and parents who play such a vital role in making youth sport happen in the borough at a grass roots level."

Club awards were given to Stoke Newington Cricket Club and Hackney BMX Club. BMX Club Manager, Tahir Suleyman, said: "The grant will help us to buy a team gazebo that will shelter us from the elements and will help us to build a stronger, more professional profile for the club. It's great to know that the Council is able to support us in this way and that our achievements are being recognised."

The winners were awarded the grants by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, at a ceremony last month. He said: "The Council's Youth Sports Fund has awarded 365 grants towards the development of young athletes from Hackney since it began in 2007.

"It provides support of up to £500 to those committed to becoming the best they can be in their chosen sport."

Another round of Youth Sports Funs applications is currently open.

Rich Mix hosts youth takeover

THIS August, Rich Mix in Shoreditch is set to host three weeks of live events in fashion, music and dance plus free creative workshops from Futureversity.

There will be a range of exciting events dedicated to young people, aged 16 to 25, from 1 to 22 August.

Young people can learn about music from around the world with the Grand Union Youth Orchestra, enjoy live art exhibitions with Merging Inks, watch Up To Scratch, a one-night theatre/dance performance, and attend a workshop on setting yourself up as a professional artist courtesy of charity Ideas Tap.

They can also participate in ACTing Up, live comedy that is judged by the audience; an introduction to documentary filmmaking with Chocolate Films; Manga drawing classes, singing lessons and many more exciting activities.

For more information, visit: www.richmix.org.uk/whats-on/festival/youth-takeover

Celebrate the Bard's 450th birthday with Hoxton Hall

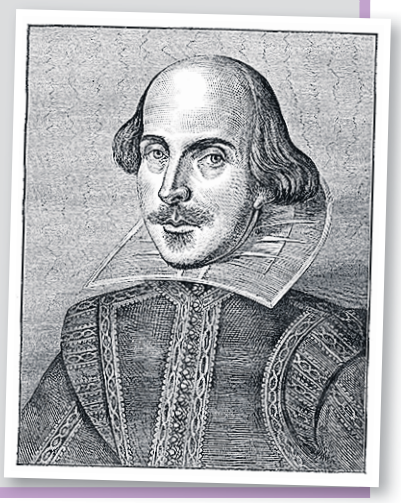

HOXTON Hall is celebrating Shakespeare's 450th birthday with a series of workshops for young people, culminating with a performance in Shoreditch Park on 23 August.

'Shakespeare Shook Up' is an ambitious programme that will see 80 young performers, aged between seven and 19, take part in dance, drama, art and music workshops and masterclasses over a period of four weeks next month.

Written by Zephryn Taitte, the end result will be a new piece incorporating many of Shakespeare's most memorable characters, some of whom have been immortalised in the names of buildings on the nearby Arden estate.

Anyone with an interest in drama, art, dance or music can get involved. The programme will need leading ladies and gentlemen, chorus players, dancers, musicians or those interested in learning how to play, and costume and set designers.

For more info, e-mail: alesha@hoxtonhall.co.uk; or call: 020 684 0060.

The sugar challenge

DO you know how much sugar you consume? Health experts are encouraging residents to think about the amount of sugar that is in what they choose to eat and drink.

A new report from Public Health England has revealed that every age group is currently consuming more than their daily recommended amount of sugar.

Those aged between 11 and 18 are most likely to be consuming too much sugar, nearly a third of which comes in the form of soft drinks. The latest figures show that one in four Year 6 pupils in Hackney are obese, at the age of just 10 or 11.

Dr Penny Bevan, Director of Public Health for Hackney, said: "Too much sugar harms our health. Excess sugar can mean excess energy, which in turn can lead to stored fat in the body and illnesses like heart disease and type 2 diabetes."

This summer, members of Hackney's public health team have been visiting schools, estates and events and asking residents to play 'The Sugar Challenge'.

The game involves identifying how many teaspoons of sugar are in various soft drinks. See if you can correctly guess the amounts (see below). People who think they are eating too much sugar should try to swap food and drink for products that have no added sugar, or are sugar-free, and look out for anything ending in -ose, like glucose, fructose or dextrose, as they are all forms of sugar.

Play the game

How many teaspoons of sugar (4g) are in these drinks?

1. Coca Cola (500ml)
2. Smooth orange juice (330ml)
3. Lucozade (380ml)
4. Water (500ml)
5. Volvic, Touch of Fruit flavoured water (500ml)

Answers: 1 = 13, 2 = 8, 3 =16, 4 = 0, 5 = 6

Campaign to think again for World Hepatitis Day

IT'S World Hepatitis Day on 28 July and this year's campaign is calling for people to 'think again' about the disease, which is often ignored, stigmatised or misunderstood.

Viral hepatitis kills 1.5 million people each year worldwide – as many people as HIV/AIDS.

Viral hepatitis is the leading cause of liver cancer, which is the second biggest cancer killer.

It is estimated that more than 2,000 residents are currently living with the Hepatitis C virus (HepC).

The group at greatest risk of becoming infected are injecting drug users. It is also possible for HepC and HepB to be spread through unprotected sex, contaminated tattooing or piercing equipment, or blood transfusions in countries that, unlike the UK, do not screen blood for the viruses.

Symptoms of viral hepatitis often go unnoticed. Simple tests are available – ask your GP if you are concerned that you may have been infected.

A vaccine for HepB is available from GPs for people at increased risk of infection, but no vaccine is available for HepC. Treatment is available for both HepB and HepC, but not all patients are suitable. For more info, visit: nhs.uk/conditions/hepatitis

A local war

THE assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary, by a Bosnian-Serb on 28 June 1914, sparked a chain of events that led to the start of the First World War.

Following declaration of war on Serbia by Austria-Hungary, Germany invaded Belgium, and Britain declared war on Germany on 4 August 1914.

The conflict that followed lasted four years and cost millions of lives worldwide.

To mark the 100th anniversary of the outbreak of the war, Hackney Archives has taken a look back at documents that show how local people reacted to the news.

Special meetings were convened of Shoreditch and Hackney borough councils, on 11 and 12 August 1914, to develop a local response. Both reported Government measures to deal with hardship, such as the establishment of a national committee, as well as local committees with representation from trade unions and philanthropic organisations. The committees would survey local work conditions and consider measures to alleviate any distress through lack of employment. They would also distribute money from a national relief fund.

Additionally, town halls and other buildings were to be used for 'enlisting and medically examining recruits and swearing in special constables'.

At the Shoreditch meeting, it was reported that a finance committee on 6 August had considered the question of payment of wages to staff who were called up for active service. It was resolved that married men receiving £2 per week or less would be paid their full wages, and in all other cases wages would be paid with a government allowance deducted. Staff posts would be kept open until workers returned from active service.

The beginning of the effects of the war on residents can be seen in a letter of 1 September 1914, regarding Councillor H J Glover, which stated 'he will be unable to attend to his duties as a Councillor for some months owing to the mobilisation of the Territorial Battalion to which he is attached.' The council resolved that he 'be informed that the Council wish him God speed and a safe return to his civil duties when peace is assured and the honour of the British Empire has been vindicated.'

Away from the official business of local authorities, the Hackney Gazette of 2 September 1914 had an interview with Colonel W. F. Fenton-Jones, the Mayor of Hackney in 1910-1911. He had gone on holiday to Switzerland with his wife and three daughters, on 17 July 1914. "About the last week in July," he said, "we noticed men were mobilising there, but we had no idea that England would be dragged into the war. Then we heard that hostilities had begun, though as there were so many rumours about, we did not believe them. We journeyed on to Grindelwald, and after being there two or three days we heard that England had declared war on Germany."

> "We heard that hostilities had begun, though as there were so many rumours about, we did not believe them"

They were advised by the British authorities to stay where they were so their safe return could be arranged. Colonel Fenton-Jones describes anxiety about food supplies, and the difficulties of tourists who had run out of money. They formed a committee to manage the situation, and got financial help from the British Embassy. Nevertheless 'most of the day we spent walking up and down the street, awaiting information as to the probability of an early train home. The scenery had completely lost its charm… Unfortunately, however, our hopes were not to be realised until Wednesday last, when we marshalled 400 visitors to the train at 4am. The entire village of Grindelwald turned out to see us off." They had a long journey from Geneva, to Paris and then Dieppe, arriving at Charing Cross two days later.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough.

The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.
Sous chef Lorren Joseph serves up a Jamaican favourite with a spicy, sweet and tangy escovitch sauce.
Lorren says: "Most white fish works really well in this recipe, such as hake, coley, sea bass or sea bream. Traditionally in Jamaica, the dish is served with red snapper, which is deep fried in a Dutch pot – as opposed to a chip fryer – but in this recipe I bake the fish to make it a bit healthier."

Jamaican escovitch fish

Serves 4

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
15-20 mins

Ingredients

For the sauce
- 100ml rice vinegar
- 2 heaped tbsp icing sugar
- 100ml extra virgin olive oil
- 3 sweet peppers (red, yellow and green), sliced
- 1 shallot, sliced
- 2-3 spring onions, sliced
- Scotch bonnet pepper to taste, sliced
- 2 carrots, grated
- 2-3 sprigs of thyme, chopped/a pinch of dried.

For the fish
- 4 fillets red snapper (or any white fish)
- a pinch of black pepper
- 1tbsp Cajun seasoning/all-purpose seasoning
- 2-3 sprigs of thyme, chopped/a pinch of dried
- Splash of olive oil.

Method

- Preheat your oven to 180C
- For the sauce, mix the rice vinegar with the icing sugar and add olive oil to taste and loosen the sauce
- Add the peppers, shallots, spring onions, scotch bonnet, carrots and thyme, and stir to combine. If the sauce is too tangy, add more sugar; if too sweet, add more vinegar (Tip: Add scotch bonnet last, little by little and taste gradually so you're in control of heat level)
- Combine fish with the seasoning ingredients
- Wrap the fish in foil, place on baking tray and bake for 15-20mins. Make sure it is firm in the centre and not too springy to the touch
- Serve the fish with the sauce, which can be served cold or warm (cold is recommended).

Consultation on Northwold Rd traffic calming measures

RESIDENTS, businesses and people who use Northwold Road and surrounding streets are being asked for their views on proposals to improve the streetscene in this area.

The Council consultation is in response to concerns raised by residents, ward members and other stakeholders about travelling along Northwold Road. The new proposals aim to create an environment that will encourage more walking and cycling, which is a key part of the Council's transport vision and an essential part of Hackney's Community Strategy.

Northwold Road is a major thoroughfare for the borough that links three overground stations: Stoke Newington, Rectory Road and Clapton. In view of this, the Council plans to improve the streetscape by reducing the risk of accidents and improve pedestrian, bus and cycle safety in the area, particularly as this is a residential area with shops and a school.

There have been 11 accidents over a three-year period along Northwold Road between Rectory Road and Upper Clapton Road, involving one serious accident, two pedestrian-related accidents and another three involving cyclists.

For more information, visit: https://consultation.hackney.gov.uk. The deadline for responses is 22 August.

Northworld Rd has been the site of 11 accidents over the last three years
